

NEW $45,000 GYM TO BE DEDICATED

Program at Frankfort March 31

One of the most momentous events in the history of Frankfort will be the public dedication of the fine new school gymnasium on Friday night March 31 at 8 p.m.

The following dedicatory program will be presented:

Selections by Frankfort band. "America" by audience led by school children.

Invocation. Introduction of school board, PWA Representative, the architect, the general contractor.

Selections by Harmonica Band of Frankfort public school.

Address by Dr. Gayle N. Hufford Supt. of Joliet City schools.

Star Spangled Banner by Frankfort band. Benediction. Selection by Frankfort band.

The new gym is of fireproof construction, concrete and brick being used. The gym is equipped with a stage size 57 x 20 feet with a seating capacity of 200. The main gym floor is 80 x 54 feet.

The bleachers in the year of the gym proper have a seating capacity of 400. The total combined seating capacity is 2000.

Lockers and showers for both boys and girls are provided in opposite sides of the gym. A special built in ticket booth is located in the main entrance.

The large room is well lighted with large windows and also with a fine system of dome lights.

This building was erected at a cost of $40,000 as a PWA project, the school district paying for half of the cost. An additional $5000 will be spent to fully equip the gym with stage curtains, chairs, etc. This is one of the finest school gyms to be found in this section of Illinois outside of cities. No other community in all this section has anything like it.

The building has been so arranged that ample room exists for the installation of a kitchen so that the new structure can be used as a community center. Much credit is due to the people of Frankfort for their fine public spirit in providing such a splendid and greatly needed gym.

In the entrance hall there are two plaques, one reading "Frankfort Gymnasium Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. Project Ill. 1957-F", the other "School Board Raymond, Warning, President, A. C. Bauch, Clerk, Ernest Pfeiffer, L. Cosby, Bernard, Architect, Henry G. Breidert. Contractor. Erected 1938-39".

Mr. Breidert of Frankfort had the general contract and has done a very fine job of which Frankfort can certainly be proud. All the building material it was possible to buy in Frankfort was purchased here and as much local labor as possible was engaged. Work on the gym was begun last fall when stakes were driven Sept. 30.

Everyone is invited to attend the dedication. No charge of any kind will be made. Alvin Hill is the principal of the Frankfort school now serving his eighth term in this school.

Vox Pop Speaks

Mr. Editor:

As a voter of this town I would like to protest against the letter which appeared in this column last week. If Back Alley Spike has anything to say for or against the young man running for village trustee, why doesn't he come out with it in plain language instead of beating around the bush? The people of Mokena are interested in good political timber and if this man is honest and wants to serve the citizens of this town, why not give him a chance. I am one hundred percent for a candidate who is willing to give his time to help improve his home town. Let's call a spade a spade.

Interested Voter.

Coming-Golgotha

'Golgotha' The Way Of The Cross, a gigantic motion picture of the world's greatest immortal story, will be presented Saturday evening, April 8th in the St. John Evangelical Church parlors in Mokena, beginning at 8 P. M.

Seeks Improvement of Highway

L. G. Bruder Mokena, has sent the following letter to Wm. Kampe, supervisor of Frankfort township, Fred Francis, supervisor of New Lenox township and Glen Fletcher county superintendent of highways, Joliet, relative to improving the highway known as Francis Road from Mokena west with a black top:

Gentlemen: "The highway running west of Mokena is the only direct and shortest highway from Mokena to Joliet and Pilcher park, and part of this highway is known as Francis Road and should be improved. I would like to know if there are funds available from Frankfort and New Lenox township and from the gas tax to improve this highway, and inasmuch as part of this highway is a State Aid Road, I presume that the county would share part of the expense.

This highway should be improved with what is known as Black Top and I would like to know if funds are available and what procedure is necessary to have this highway improved. I am writing you as a taxpayer and citizen and hope you will favor me with a reply."

Much Interest In Mokena School Director Election

The coming school election April 8 in Mokena promises to attract a record breaking vote from present indications.

The election will be held in the Mokena village hall in the afternoon from 2 to 7 o'clock. A caucus will be held from 1:30 to 2 o'clock. So far there are two candidates in the field for the office of school director namely: Peter Mancke and Irvin Rabinov.

Under the school laws in districts managed by a board of school directors no printed ballots are required and the voters can indicate their choice by writing the name of their candidate on blank forms. In these districts it is not necessary to have a square in front of the name, or to put a cross in a square. The school law also provides that in a school district controlled by 3 school directors, two of the members of the board shall act as judges and one as clerk. Should any of these fail to appear by the time of opening of the polls, the voters present may choose persons to conduct the election.

One year's residence in the state 90 days in the county and 30 days in the district is the legal time required to qualify a voter as an elector in a school district to which he or she has recently become a resident.

Thieves Ransack New Lenox Home

Thieves broke into the home of Aug. Ziegler in New Lenox the early part of Sunday evening and stole $250 in cash, a fur coat, overcoat, dresses, several watches and insurance papers. The thieves gained entrance through smashing a window.

Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler discovered the theft upon their return home shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday evening. The robbery was reported to the Sheriff's office in Joliet, but so far no trace has been found of the thieves.

Spikes Rumor

Alfred Emiley, candidate for supervisor of New Lenox township on the Citizens ticket wishes to spike a rumor that has been going the rounds of the township this week to the effect that he is a friend of Fred Francis, the present supervisor and that he filed for the office of supervisor solely for the purpose of keeping other candidates out of the field and to protect the candidacy of Mr. Francis.

Mr. Emiley wishes it to be understood that there is not an iota of truth in this rumor and that he is very definitely in the race on his own and to prove this to the readers of this paper he is extending an invitation to the voters of New Lenox township to attend a mass meeting to be held in the Emiley hall in New Lenox on Friday night, March 31 at 8 p.m. at which time Mr. Emiley states he will tell the voters why and how he is in the race. There will also be entertainment and refreshments.

SIX FOOT RED HEADS COMING TO FRANKFORT

One of the biggest attractions ever offered in basketball is scheduled to come to the new Frankfort school gym on the afternoon of Sunday, April 2nd when a team of red headed girls, most of whom are six feet tall will play the outstanding players of the various basketball teams from the towns in this territory.

This girls' team is known as the world's champion girls basketball club. They play straight men's rules against amateur men's teams.

They have played the almost unbelievable total of 185 games their second season of 1937-38. A basketball record. By March 3rd this season they had won 87 games upon defeating the U. S. Army team at Fort Monterey, Cal., before a $483 house. This made three U. S. Army teams defeated this season.

The Red Heads can present an entire team of six footers and have never been beaten by a girls' team. They are the world's most beautifully dressed team, being outfitted in an outfit costing $100 per girl.

On Sunday, April 2nd, at 3:30 p. m. these Red Heads will meet a sectional all star team in the new Frankfort gym. This will mark the grand opening of the new gym for basketball and the proceeds from the game will be used to defray the expense of equipping the gymnasium.

The Sectional All stars to meet the Red Heads will be composed of the following outstanding men players: Swede Uthe, Heiding, Steinhagen (6 ft. 6 in.) and Nicolai of Orland Park; Jungles, Lauffer and Mueller of Mokena; Lehman, Nielsen and Schult of Tinley Park, Wall and Holt of Hazel Crest; Kruspe of New Lenox and three Joliet stars. A preliminary game at 2:30 will be played between Manhattan Independents and the Frankfort A. C.

Coach Wills of the Joliet Junior College and an assistant from Joliet will officiate at these games.

The new gym will accommodate comfortably over 600 people and the promoters invite all basketball fans to turn out en masse and fill the new gym with a full capacity house.

DRINKING SONG BRINGS $50,000 DAMAGE SUIT

Attorney Albert Krusemark, Jr. of Frankfort, who recently opened a law office in the Barber building in Joliet, has filed his first big lawsuit.

Last Friday morning he filed a $50,000 slander suit in the Cook County Circuit court against radio station WCFL and Herr Loui of the Old Heidelberg Inn both located in Chicago on behalf of Rev. R. Zimmermann of Papineau, Ill.

According to the bill of particulars Rev. Mr. Zimmermann was pastor of the St. John Evangelical church in Bensenville, Ill. in 1938. He took a definite stand against the serving of beer at church picnics of his congregation. The attitude seemed to anger some of his parishioners and someone whose identity has not been discovered, sent a request written in pencil on pencil paper to Herr Louie asking that a German Drinking song entitled "Drink, Brother Drink" be sung in honor of Rev. Mr. Zimmermann which request was granted without question on March 18, 1938. After this song was broadcast the minister lost his pastorate at Bensenville. He accepted a call from Weimar, Texas but this congregation got to hear of the drinking song episode with the result that the pastor was notified not to come.

The pastor and friendly members of his former Bensenville congregation took the matter up with WCFL and Herr Louie asking them to make amends for the great wrong they had done, but they refused to make any settlement and as a result the pastor finally filed a $50,000 damage suit against them.

Rev. Mr. Zimmermann is at present pastor of a small church at Papineau.

Will Aid Club

Mokena Civic club at their meeting held Monday evening, voted to pay the wages of several men to assist the unloading of an entire load of cinders for the Mokena Garden plot, a car being expected in the latter part of the week. The cinders are to be used for filling up a low spot on Rock Island land south of the depot which the Garden club is going to beautify this summer.

Amateur Show Next

The Frankfort Civic club will sponsor a two night amateur show in the new Frankfort gymnasium on the evenings of April 20 and 21. Efforts are being made to make this a very outstanding attraction. Amateurs from all over this territory are urged to take part in this show. Those wishing to do so should get in touch with Edw. Vollrath, Frankfort Phone 49W. Watch this paper for more particulars.

To Present Play

The Epworth League of Frankfort will present a play "The Clay's Thing" at the New school gym on Friday evening, April 14 at 8 p. m. Everyone cordially invited.

Mokena Alumni Ends Season With Two Victories

The Mokena Alumni basketball team finished the 1938-39 season with two victories Tuesday evening.

The teams defeated were from the St. John's English Lutheran church of Joliet, the score of the lightweights being Mokena 29, Joliet 27. Heavyweights Mokena 45, Joliet 40.

A meeting of the Mokena alumni will be held Monday evening, March 27 at 7:30 in the Cooper & Hostert garage. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss any problems that may be brought up by members and to close the business for the season. Next season the teams will probably continue their activities under the same name, the Mokena Alumni.

BREAK GROUND FOR $60,000 SCHOOL ADDITION

Ground was broken Thursday for the new $60,000 addition to the New Lenox public school, the district bearing $12,000 of the cost, the balance being a PWA grant. The new addition calls for three school rooms a large meeting room, a new heating plant. This much addition will relieve the present congested condition of the school.

Mokena Civic Asso. Hears Importance of Railroads Stressed

A large and enthusiastic membership attended the meeting of the Mokena Civic association Monday evening in the church parlors of the Immanuel Lutheran church.

Interesting committee reports were made. N. F. Heiman made a report relative to the skating rink proposition. Last fall the Civic association secured a lease from the Rock Island railroad on a piece of railroad land on which they located a skating rink. After the rink was completed and used once, George J. Hacker entered a vigorous protest to the Rock Island against the rink which is located across the street from his home. He objected on the ground that the rink was causing water to seep into his basement. A committee was sent to wait on him by the Civic association and Mr. Hacker offered to pay toward a new rink location, also to build shelters, etc. Next the Civic group looked about for a new rink location and the old school grounds in the east end of Mokena was looked upon favorably, but Mr. Heiman in his report showed that now the old school plot was being offered for sale by the township school trustees for $1,000 and that if the Civic association did negotiate for the ground for the new rink site, the rink would have to be abandoned in case the land was sold, so the rink proposition is evidently on the shelf for the time being. It seems too bad that there is so little co-operation when it comes to providing recreation for the young folks.

It was indeed something to rejoice over to be able to be together after a span of fifty years.

Return From 2300 Mile Hitch-Hike Trip To Cal. Fair

Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall, famous Mokena globe trotters returned last Friday from a 2300 mile hitch-hike trip to the California Fair. Mr. Hall presents some interesting facts in the following article:

Let's go West. In other words let's go to the Fair.

The Golden Gate International Exposition on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay is in full swing.

We were there at the opening Feb. 18, 1939. But of that later.

There are so many things from the "Get ready to take off" and the possible decision to be made regarding when to go, how to go and what to ride, what route to take etc., that we should leave for the moment the description and importance of the Fair itself. Of course you have decided to go, and that's that.

I think possibly you have taken into consideration all that the visit to the Fair means to we of the midle west. It is not alone just what we are going to find on Treasure Island, although if that were all it would be worth your time, but to start from your very door in the Chicago area and to take your way across the most interesting landscape to be found in the whole world; and it all lies between wherever you happen to be and the gateway to the Western sea.

It's rugged but it's gentle—It's as old as creation, but it's new. It is typically Western. It's age to us is little more than a hundred years. The spirit of the West. The spirit of the Pioneer still prevails. It will never fade from those who people the land of the mighty hills and grassy plains. It's in the very air they breathe.

In my series of articles on "Let's Go West" it will not be my purpose to reminisce, to present my impressions or to relate incidents attending our rather romantic journeyings.

I feel that it is information you want. At least that is what I am going to try to give you.

Personal experience, of course, is good and to "learn wisdom from the things we suffer" is splendid, but to "make the grade," starting just right, with your "cache" (not cash, don't worry about that) adequate but light, your "ten gallon" at just the proper angle, our neck scarf properly adjusted with the clasp under the right ear and with not too much jangling of your spurs, brings the most satisfying and gratifying results.

MOUNTAIN MAN

HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

COPYRIGHT-HAROLD CHANNING WIRE W.N.U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Cotter's job, hoping to avenge his murder. "Dad" Cook, forest superintendent, warns Breck that the Tillson brothers, mountain moonshiners, are apt to give him trouble. Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys an outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "cowgirl" for whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck, she is being courted by Art Tillson, youngest of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight which ends indecisively when someone sets fire to the hall. Breck and his chief set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra Slim, moss-back mountaineer who is also in the forest service. Breck learns from Sierra that tracking down Jim Cotter's murderer must be done cautiously. Cook, Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountains. They sight the Tillsons, returning to their hideaway. Next day, Cook sends Breck and Sierra in one direction to repair the telephone line, while he takes another. Sierra tells Breck more about Louise Temple. "That kid's a thoroughbred," he says. He also believes that Art Tillson is not essentially "bad," but is the victim of circumstances. Breck is directed to go to Rock House Meadow, his permanent base. On his way, he is the target of a pistol shot from an unseen assailant. The bullet misses, but his frightened pack animals bolt and Breck goes in pursuit. Finding a deserted cabin, he takes shelter from the rain. A moment later the three Tillson brothers arrive and Breck hides in the cabin loft. Breck hears the three discuss a plot against his life. Waiting his chance, Breck surprises the brothers and holds them at the point of his gun. Jud, the oldest brother, offers a bribe if Breck will "make no trouble." Breck pretends to take the offer into consideration, lets the men go. Breck's duty is to take count at the end of the cattle drive at Rock House Meadow. There he meets Louise Temple who is running her own cattle. Trapped in a narrow canyon before the onrushing steeds, Breck's quick action saves her from being trampled. He takes her to his cabin over Art Tillson's protest. With nightfall, Louise, now recovered, leaves the cabin and makes her camp in the meadow. Later, Breck rides over to see if everything is all right. Find Art Tillson who tries to pick a quarrel. Breck rides on and discovers a large herd of cattle being driven out of the meadow before the count. They belong to Jackson, cowman who represents all the ranchers in the cattle run. Breck tells Jackson that the government laws are to be enforced. The cattle count starts. Feeling among the cattlemen is tense as Breck turns back all cattle in excess of each man's allotment. Jud Tillson confronts him with life bribe he had previously offered.

Old Jackson's hands fell angrily about his saddle horn. "Dam' robbery! They cost twenty-five dollars down below."

"All right, take them back there." Jud moved to depart.

Breck had remained out of the deal, turning away while the two talked. Now he felt Jackson's eyes boring into him, and facing the man, it was as if he had been struck. No eyes had ever viewed him with such scorn.

They turned into his face for a moment, then went to Jud. "Pay me."

Two thousand dollars in yellow bills were counted out. Jud rode off to claim the herd. Jackson rolled up the money and stuffed it into his pocket with slow tense fingers.

At last he faced Breck, hard-eyed, tight-lipped. "I've seen some graft-in' government men," he began, "but you do beat 'em all to hell! You with your talk of keepin' rules and playin' these mountains fair for everybody. By God . . ."

"Just a minute," Breck cut in. "Do you mind explaining what this is all about?"

"Explain hell! Don't need more than a blind man to see what it's about. How come Tillson to have this cash so handy? Of course you didn't throw in with him! Hell no. You hold out our stuff and he just happens to have two thousand dollars ready!"

Breck started to speak, but there was little enough for him to offer. He couldn't go into details of the bribe. That itself would need considerable explaining, and would only add a queer story to what these men thought against him.

"Jackson," he said, "you're branding me with a lie. In time I'll prove it!"

For an instant the old man's glare lost some of its hard accusation, though he wheeled away in grim silence.

Breck mounted Kit and sat alone while the last of the herds vanished out of Rock House Meadow. No man came near him; nor the one figure he watched intently. She gathered up the cattle he had allowed to pass, and rode her blue horse behind the bowl without a look backward.

CHAPTER XII

At sunrise the next morning Breck ran up the Stars and Stripes in front of his cabin. Having done that, he could almost hear a hum of wheels and the click of Forest Service machinery turning into place.

About seven he opened the iron box and checked in to headquarters. "How does the world look to you now?" Cook asked.

"Better," Breck answered. In his report last night he had told the ranger of his deal with the cattlemen, and had cursed the job that forced him to make enemies. "What's in line for today?" he continued, "patrol?"

"No; I'm not sending you on the trail until tomorrow. Look over your fire tools, sharpen up your axes and brush hooks, and get things in good shape. You might not have time later. Get yourself settled and feeling at home."

"Suits me," Breck agreed.

He spent the day with grindstone and files, putting a razor edge on double-bitted axes, and making the long curved brush-hooks fit for any man's war. At noon his horses and mule came to the fence gate nearby, thrust their necks over the top and said something about lunch. He fed them barley and they went off to nibble at flowers in the pasture. Before night he had his tool box arranged for action.

Next morning, talking to headquarters he asked Cook to send him on patrol to Sulphur Creek.

"Take your time, son," the ranger answered. "We're not ready for that. Today you might as well ride the Kern River trail. Look over the country west of you—all that lying between Sulphur and the Potholes. There's your worst fire hazard. You'll find some tourist camps on the river. Go in and say howdy."

Breck obeyed orders, inwardly revolting, though he knew the old ranger was guided by wisdom of experience. So, day by day, he was forced to put down his impatience and work at the forest's job.

He explored his district west and south, talked with tourists over their mid-day fires, climbed high peaks and from that vantage studied the geography of the maze of streams and interlocking ridges. As he became more and more familiar with this roof land, the Sierra Nevadas lost some of the forbidding aspect they had presented at first.

The approach of July meant spring in the top country. Days were warm, though nights remained close to freezing. Now he rode through meadows purple with larkspur; climbed long rock ridges in a blaze of red snow flowers. At dusk he returned to his cabin with evening primroses opened in yellow cups underfoot, filling the air with sweet delicate perfume.

Repeatedly he found his thoughts traveling eastward beyond the bowl of Rock House. His gaze went often to a trail that led up the notch toward a certain camp fifteen miles distant. It seemed as if Dad Cook had read his wish when he gave the order one morning, "You had better swing around by Temple Meadow today."

There was a blazed trail from Rock House to Temple's camp, but Breck was in a hurry somehow and rode Kit up a ridge and along its crest on a route of his own. It was half an hour before noon as he crossed the last summit and descended into a wide strip of grassland. A flag of cabin smoke came from a clump of trees at the further end. He rode toward it rapidly, his eyes searching for a cowboy who was not a cowboy at all.

Two cabins stood in the trees, one old and weathered, with a low, sheet-iron roof; the other of logs new within the past three years, for hewn surfaces still showed bright yellow. Red and white checked curtains in the window of this last told that a woman lived in it, and the whole look around the outside was of a woman's neatness, with saddle gear hung on wooden horses, lariats coiled, pack canvas folded and piled in the shelter of a pine.

The other was as plainly a man's shanty, where a man could kick things about and enjoy the mess. One window pane was broken and stuffed with a gunny sack. A black bear pelt, freshly skinned and salted, was nailed on the logs of the front end. A low bench stood near the door, with tobacco cans littering the ground under it.

It was from this cabin that Breck saw smoke rising. A door opened as he came out of the woods and crossed a short clearing. He recognized Louise Temple, though not the girl he had been picturing.

She wore a dress today; something short, dark green like the forest, with the red of snow flowers in it; and somehow he was meeting her all over again.

She smiled, holding up her hand to him even before he dismounted. "Hello, Ranger. Sorry I didn't see you after the count."

He wondered if she meant it. "I was pretty busy," he said, as if the explanation should come from him.

"Things were happening that day."

"Yes; weren't they?"

He swung down and met her anxiously. "You think—"

Louise checked him with an impatient wave of her hand. "Sometimes I find it best not to think at all."

"One's mind is never blank."

"Mine is . . . often!"

"But you're bound to think once in a while," Breck laughed, then added seriously, "I don't want you to believe what Jackson has said of me."

A searching look came into the girl's eyes. "The cattlemen think it, and that's what you ought to consider."

"Let them," Breck answered. "Right now I value your opinion, not theirs."

Sharply Louise shook her brown head.

"My opinion is the least important," Gordon Breck. "Impatience that was so much a part of her nature flared openly. "Don't you understand that? You can't work up here with these men against you. They may be wrong but they're powerful. If you're a square-shooter, you've got to prove it."

Breck stared at her. In some way, he could not tell how, perhaps in her eyes, or voice, he caught a meaning beyond her words. She spoke of cattlemen, but it was as if she were asking him to prove his square-dealing to them—and to herself.

"Why do you talk to me like this?" he asked.

With a quick little laugh she lifted her face to him. "Because you are so helpless!"

Helpless! He had the impulse to kiss her mouth and then spank her. So that was it!

"You take a big chance, young lady," he grinned. "Do I look so weak?"

She answered with dark eyes sweeping over him eagerly. "No, I can't say you do!"

They both turned as a horseman trotted out of the timber and rode toward them. Then Louise darted into the cabin. Breck heard a rattling of stove lids and saw smoke increase from the chimney.

"That's Buster," she said on coming back, "hungry as a coyote and on time to the dot. He's my father. Maybe you've heard him called Tom Temple."

Remembering that Temple was an invalid, Breck watched with considerable wonder as the man halted at a tie rack, threw himself from his saddle and reached the ground on one foot, while bearing most of his weight with a grip on the horse's mane.

"The old deer," Louise said devotedly. "He does get around."

She waved as her father looked up. "Come along, Buster! Steak's on the fire and we've got company for dinner."

Temple turned his horse into the pasture, picked up a cane and approached across the clearing. "Howdy, Ranger," he said, offering his hand with no word of introduction. "I was thinkin' you ought to come and give us a call."

"Glad to do it," Breck returned, and at once he knew where Louise acquired her warm personality.

Tom Temple was the sort to be marked in any gathering. Although an injury to his left hip drew him a little to that side, he still retained a vigorous bearing, and when he sat upon the bench, showed none of his handicap. But the lines of his face, even when he smiled, told of suffering, and his hair was snow white.

Breck could sense the battle of a hard-working man suddenly reduced to camp chores. He wondered if Temple had ever gone to a good surgeon. There was an army friend of his who had done marvelous things with fractured bones, and a case like this . . .

"If you men don't come and get

Pocket Knife Has Lost Favor and the Old-Time Whittlers Have Passed Away

The old-fashioned pocket knife with which the small boy of a generation ago carved willow whistles and played mumble-the-peg appears to have had its heyday. Either that or the simplification of modern industrial production has reduced its models more than half, according to the evidence of hardware catalogues, notes a writer in the Chicago Daily News.

The volume of sales for pocket knives has not kept pace with the increase in population in the last three or four decades, sales officials report.

"Our latest catalogue lists 30 selections among pocket knives," said one, "whereas our 1910 catalogue listed 104 different models. I don't think that the boys or men of today feel the same pride in possessing a pocket knife as did those of the previous generation."

Where, years ago, the lad who owned a two or three bladed with a stag-horn handle considered himself something of a "big shot," today the average young man seems satisfied with a small ornamental knife on a watch chain. As for the "tough guy" of today, he most likely carries a toy gun instead of the old-fashioned "toad sticker" that snapped open when you pressed it.

That expert of the pocket knife, the whittler, seems to have disappeared, too. There was a time when every neighborhood had a whittler or two who could make a length of chain out of a piece of pine, or maybe fashion a full rigged ship and put it into a small necked bottle. But these experts are hard to find nowadays.

An exception is a Chicago man it I'll throw it away!" Louise had entered the cabin ahead of them. She stood now in the door, an apron over her dress, threatening with a bread knife.

Temple laughed. "She means that too! We'd better go in and eat."

Dinner was set on the bare boards of a slab table. A platter full of thick steaks, a bowl of mashed potatoes, then canned fruit, and big round loaves of home-made bread. Grub for a man! Breck felt that food had never looked nor tasted so good.

He sat across from Louise, Temple at the end, and they talked of many things but pot of cattle and grazing. There was a reason, Breck surmised, though if the man held any hard feeling over enforcement of the permit rule, he covered it well beneath his hospitality.

The manner Louise had with her father gave Breck a new perception of herself. She was sympathetic, understanding, yet never once pampered him in ways that would only have emphasized his crippled condition.

And Temple was proud of his girl. His eyes followed her, always bright with a strange eagerness. Over their dessert of canned peaches, he said, "You won't find many cowhands like the one I've got, Ranger!"

Breck looked across at Louise laughingly, though serious in his answer. "I'm beginning to believe it."

"Ain't no man on the range can beat her ridin' or ropin'," Temple went on. "Just you wait till we have a rodeo after saltin' time—always in the top money, she is."

"Now Buster," Louise checked him. "Be careful. You know last year . . ."

"They judged you wrong, kid!" Temple declared hotly.

"Where do you have this rodeo?" Breck asked.

"Here on the meadow—end of this month or first part of August. Every outfit in the mountains rides a man or two. Better aim to be on hand."

Breck promised he would.

They sat at the table until the sun had passed the door and was beginning to slant through a western window. Reluctantly Breck thought of the trail to Rock House.

"Hate to do it," he said at last, "but I'll have to move on."

As the girl's father stood up and walked from the door, Breck lingered with Louise, helped clear the table, and watched with a growing intensity of feeling as she paused before the mirror to give a little definite push and pat to her brown hair. Then she came to him and they went outside together.

Temple was not around, but Breck saw a thick canvas roll tied on his saddle skirt, and knew that it was the cattle country's goodwill offering—a present of fresh beef. He could count this man his friend.

After untying Kit, he walked with Louise toward a gate in the fence that circled the cabins. Her face was averted and she did not speak as they approached the opening. Breck reached to pull back the bars; lifted one and put it down.

He slipped his hand down over hers and the pressure of his fingers was answered. He could have taken her in his arms, but she gently moved away and pushed back the poles. It seemed a gesture for him to go.

Mounting, he rode through, said "Good-by" and passed on toward the forest. At its edge he looked back. She had remained near the gate. The poles were still down. Her very poise showed how intently she watched him, and when he turned, she waved with a quick eager movement of her whole body.

PETER INTERPRETS CHRIST'S SUFFERINGS AND DEATH

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 1:17-23; 2:20-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit—I Peter 3:18.

A witness is one who knows by personal experience about that concerning which he testifies. Certainly no one could speak with more propriety or assurance concerning the sufferings and death of Christ than Peter. As one of the inner circle, he, with James and John, was with Jesus on almost every important occasion. He was on the Mount of Transfiguration, and with the Lord in the garden of Gethsemane. He witnessed His trial and in all probability His crucifixion. He was first at the empty tomb. Furthermore, he could speak as one who had in a moment of weakness denied the Lord and who had come by way of doubt and despair back to his faith in the Saviour. It is not only appropriate that we should study Peter's words on this subject but it is also the greatest possible theme with which to close our three-month study of the life and work of Peter. For all that he was and all that he did, can be explained only by his faith in a redeeming Christ.

I. Christ—the Saviour (I Pet. 1:17-23).

It is highly important that we meet the flood of smoothly phrased recognition of our Christ as the Master which at the same time denies Him as dying Redeemer. Hence we stress

1. A redemption by blood (vv. 17-20). This is a subject that all those who know God and "call on him as Father" (v. 17) approach in that reverential attitude which we call the "fear of God," which is not a cringing fear but a loving reverence. In that spirit we should proclaim that apart from the shedding of Christ's blood there can be no remission of sin. Money and other material things can only purchase other material and corruptible things. Our redemption could be bought only by the precious blood of the sinless, divine, and eternal Son of God, Jesus Christ (vv. 19, 20).

2. A life of faith (vv. 21-23). The faith and hope of the Christian are "in God." We do not trust in the arm of flesh. Our assurance is not in man or his devices. The gathering of riches, the increase of armaments, the acquisition of new territory by fair means or foul—let foolish men who know not God rejoice in such assurances of safety, but our faith is in God.

This life of faith is not an inactive thing, a settling back into a comfortable but effortless appreciation of God's great gift. It leads to obedience to the truth; fervent, unfeigned love of the brethren; purity of life (v. 22). Being born again means living in newness of life in Christ.

II. Christ—the Example (I Pet. 2:20-25).

Christ is not our example in the sense that we are to attain to eternal life and joy by an imitation of His life. That would be manifestly impossible, for we would have to begin where He began—He was without sin. But we "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." We need a Saviour, not an example, as far as redemption is concerned. Having been saved by faith in His blood, we are ready to look upon Him as our example.

1. Our suffering (vv. 20, 21). One of the serious problems of life is suffering, and as we suggested last week, being a Christian does not grant us any immunity. If we suffer because of our own sin, we must expect to bear the result patiently; but even above that, when we find ourselves suffering for well-doing, we are to glorify God by bearing it patiently for Christ's sake. Nothing is a stronger testimony for Christ than a true Christian spirit in time of trial and sorrow.

2. The suffering of Christ (vv. 21-25). Our minds turn to Isaiah 53 and Psalm 22, as well as to the Gospel narratives, as we think of our Lord's suffering. As we read the words, "Christ . . . suffered for you," we join the saintly expositor of the Word who fell upon his face sobbing. "For me, for me, He bore it all for me." How can anyone reject Him? How can you, unsaved reader of these lines, any longer turn this loving Saviour away?

These are trying days for the souls of men. In many parts of the world Christians are tasting the bitter cup of persecution. The day may come when we must meet the same fate, and even now we know what it means to bear the scorn of unbelievers. Shall we become fearful or embittered in our hearts? No, "consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin" (Heb. 12:3, 4). But He did! Wonderful Saviour!

SAFETY TALKS

IF YOU know all the rules about wearing rubbers when it rains, red flannel undies in the winter, and if you don't sleep in a draft, you probably take pretty good care of your health. But how about your safety?

The National Safety council reports that from the age of three years to 21, accidents kill more persons (both sexes) than any disease; from the age of three years to 40, accidents kill more males than any disease.

Among males of all ages only heart disease claims more victims than accidents—301.6 of every 100,000 males die of heart disease each year while accidents kill 119.6. Among the ladies, six diseases rank above accidents as a cause of fatalities. They are heart disease, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage, pneumonia and chronic nephritis.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

The first regular meeting this year of the Sunshine 4-H club was held Sunday March 19, at Mrs. Kampe's home. The meeting began with a poem by Bernilda Stuckey thanking the girls for their cooperation in the past year. Election of officers was the main business. The duties of each office was explained and the following girls were then chosen: Bernilda Stuckey, reelected pres., Dorothy Wille, vice pres., sec. and club reporter Pearl Wille, recreation leader Elvira Stuckey, assistant leaders Hilda Wille and Mary Dowling.

It was decided to order a three months subscription of Madamasoille for the club. The girls also are planning to enter a demonstration team in the county contest this year. The program planning committee consisting of Bernilda Stuckey, Dorothy and Pearl Wille will meet at Stuckey's next Sunday to outline the activities of the club for this year. The annual spring rally will be held in Blue Island April 15, it was planned to have the smaller girls put on their tap dance stunt then.

The next meeting will be April 13 at 8 p.m. with the Keuch sisters. All the girls that want to join the club should be present at this meeting. The meeting then adjourned and a lovely buffet lunch was enjoyed. Pearl Wille, club reporter.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORY OF MRS. SOPHIA KAMPE who passed away one year ago, March 28, 1938

Dear, you left us to go To a better place we know But you still are in our mind Tho we miss your sweet smile It will be just for a little while For if in faith we stand We shall meet you in that promised land.

A TRIBUTE TO OUR MOTHER

Our Mother has been laid to rest. What God has done, we know is best. Her work and toil on earth is o'er, We know she is on yonder shore.

We think back of our childhood days: She understood our erring ways, She tried to lead us to be good And do the things we ought and should.

Our dear old mother, we shall miss, Her kindly deeds and loving kiss, Her smiling face greets no more As now we knock upon her door.

We should not weep for she is blest. She has sweet peace, content and rest.

We do not know the time or day When we shall walk that same way.

If we but in each word and deed A Christian life we can but lead, We all will meet on yonder shore Where loved ones dwell forever more.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY SCHMAEDEKE, FRED AND EHLE.

Henry Brueggeman was able to be back at his grain office this week after a long siege of illness. His many friends are glad to see him out again.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis, a daughter.

Meaning of the Meter Miser

Over a period of several summers there has appeared in a great many published advertisements the phrase, Meter Miser, in connection with one specific make of electric refrigerator. At first taken to be just an advertising phrase, it has appeared so persistently and has made such a definite impression upon the public mind, that it has stimulated a more complete inquiry as to just what lay behind the idea. Some interesting facts were brought to light as a result.

Basically, the term, Meter-Miser, is the trade marked name of a wholly new design in refrigerator mechanism. As might be guessed, one of its characteristics is economy in operation, altho its makers are just as enthusiastic about its long dependable life, free from service troubles, as they are about its month to month economy of operation.

To appreciate the innovation represented by the Meter-Miser, one should have some slight knowledge of so-called conventional refrigerator mechanism. All electric refrigerators have compressors and so far as the layman is concerned these are merely pumps used not only for circulating refrigerant, but also for expelling heat in the process of transforming refrigerant vapor into refrigeant liquid. But good pumps, such as must be used for refrigerators, must have a number of things not apparent on the surface. Pistons must move within cylinders, valves must open and close just at the right moment, they must be driven by electric motors thru the medium of belts or shafts or gears, and an array of other equipment of more minor nature must be present and in harmony with the whole assembly.

Orland Village
Clerk Reports
on Ill. Municipal League Meet

The Illinois Municipal League sent out letters to all municipalities who are members of the League, asking that a delegate be sent to the Legislative Conference, which would be held at the Abraham Lincoln hotel, Springfield, Ill., Wednesday March 8, 1939.

President Kollman of Orland Park, appointed the clerk, Mrs. H. Adele Cooper, to act as their representative.

The purpose and duty of the Illinois Municipal League is to perceive the needs of Illinois Municipalities and to be anxious to minister to those needs. One of the principal needs of municipalities this year is to secure helpful legislation. This is true for the reason that state laws are the basis of all municipal powers and activities and the General Assembly is now in session. For these reasons the Rockford Convention of the league last September adjourned to Springfield for a Legislative conference in March.

The morning session was opened by the president of the Illinois Municipal league, P. Meyer of Danville, who is an active and capable man for the office. He believes that if municipal officials of the state, acting as a group and have at their command facilities for free interchange of experiences and information through the league, they will be well qualified to determine and express the legislative needs of our cities, villages and incorporated towns. It is therefore, entirely fitting and proper that the league should formulate and sponsor legislation in the interests of Illinois Municipalities. In doing, so the league need not, and will not, act as a lobby or pressure group but rather in a spirit of friendly cooperation with the legislature. He proposes to place its act fairly and honestly upon the various problems, in view of the fact and reasons presented. The legislative program of the league contains nothing which might be considered radical or which would impose any hardship on any one person or group. Our program as a whole is designed to effect the enactment of legislation which would assist municipalities to provide more efficient and more economical government for our citizens and taxpayers. Every municipal official should study the legislative program and immediately contact his Senator and Representatives and request such legislator to give his active support to the entire program. It is important also that municipal officials come to Springfield as many times during the session as possible in order that they may attend important committee hearings and keep in close touch with the activities of the legislation affecting municipalities. The Legislative committee and staff of the Illinois Municipal league have spent much time and effort in working out a legislative program which, if enacted, would materially benefit every city, village and incorporated town in the state. The legislative committee and staff of the league will work untiringly for the enactment of the entire program, but we cannot do the job alone. We must have the help of every municipal official in the state.

President Meyer called the various senatorial district advisors to give their reports or exchange ideas on legislation both local and state. Those reporting were the following mayors: Dist. 6., Henry D. Penfield, Evanston; Dist. 10, Charles Brown, Rockford; Dist. 12, Luke Stuart, Freeport; Dist. 18, David McClugage, Peoria; Dist. 28, Charles Lee, Decatur; Dist. 34, E. E. Richardson, Mattoon; Dist. 36, Leo W. Lenane, Quincy; Dist. 49, George Remsnie, Belleville; Dist. 14, Harry Warner, Aurora; Dist. 30, W. E. Schurman, Pekin; Dist. 26, Mark B. Hayes, Bloomington.

The discussion of the morning meeting was seeking a method to solve their financial problems. "That a way be provided for raising funds to meet increased firemen's and policemen's salaries."

President Meyer suggested that all mayors effected by this bill hold a conference at the Speakers office, which they did. Secretary A. D. McLarty of the league presented Speaker Hugh W. Cross with three suggestions, that the legislature provide added taxing power, repeal the wage laws or permit cities to vote on adoption of the minimum wages.

Speaker Cross advised the city officials to decide upon a course following seeking legislation and that members of the General Assembly would be glad to give their proposals every consideration.

Another proposal authorized requests that legislators provide some means for cities to obtain revenue to pay back salaries for firemen and policemen. Even though the laws are repealed, it was pointed out the cities will be forced to pay salaries under the higher scale for the two years since the law went into effect.

The afternoon meeting of Municipal Attorneys and Corporation counsel was presided over by Honorable Perry D. Wells, Elgin Attorney. Topic, "Suggestions for Improvement of the Collections of Delinquent Special Assessments." Discussion led by city attorney of Galesburg, Mr. Jerry Harm. There was a long discussion on this subject pro and con, on ways to proceed collections or foreclosure proceedings. What is the most practical way or best method to do, should the city be allowed to bid and secure sale of property or property owner have the right, try and compromise, have a period of redemption, bring the bond holder in with municipality if selling property or should the bond holder be the loser?

Another resolution proposed by attorneys and was adopted by the league, as favoring a bill to amend the fire and police commissioners civil service act to provide mayors with power to appoint chiefs of fire and police departments. There was a good representation at both meetings.

In the evening a Legislative conference banquet at the Abraham Lincoln hotel, a general get together of state and city officials. The guests of honor was Honorable John Stelle, acting Governor of Illinois and Members of the Sixty First General Assembly.

Presiding was Honorable Frank P. Meyer, league president and mayor of Danville, welcoming all of the guests, stating there were 700 members in the Illinois Municipal League and the convention this fall would be held at Kankakee September 12, inviting all to be present.

Hon. John Stelle, who seems to be a very conscientious man, was introduced, then Speaker Hugh W. Cross, a broadminded person, said: "It seems as though these meetings always happen early in General Assembly, that there must be a motive for our being here tonight. In behalf of the Illinois General Assembly, he would cooperate constructively with all and try to be helpful and meet the problems of legislation."

Mayor David H. McClugage of Peoria, chairman of the league's legislative committee, acted as toastmaster.

The past president and Mayor of Springfield, who is liked by all, Hon. John W. Kapp said, "There was a need for closer cooperation between municipal officials and the General Assembly, to invite your legislators and talk over municipal problems, that the league is doing fine sincere work and every piece of legislation was given the proper thought."

Legislative proposals of Illinois Municipalities under consideration by the League, were outlined by speakers.

1. A general grant of local control over local affairs; by the Mayor of Aurora, Harry B. Warner.

2. A Sound and adequate retirement plan for municipal employees. Authority for townships to use Relief money for the purchase of materials on city WPA projects, Chas. Lee, Mayor of Decatur.

3. Amend road and bridge laws so that 70 per cent of the road and bridge tax paid in municipalities may be used by municipalities. Clarify the power of municipalities to regulate the sale of second hand or used personal property, Mayor of Rockford, Charles F. Brown.

4. Restore to municipalities control over the use of streets by public utilities, R. M. O'Connell, city attorney of Bloomington.

5. Reduce the Tort liability of municipalities for defective sidewalks. Charles H. Edwards, corporation counsel of Aurora.

President Meyers gave Governor Stelle a surprise and asked, "What he thought of the meeting?" His response was this, "I have been in the state government for eight years and had heard many problems presented, but complimented the league as never before have I had problems presented better than tonight."

Mrs. Cooper thinks the Seventh Senatorial District is to be complimented on its representation. Our faithful friends and officials, Senator Arthur J. Bidwill, Representatives Bernice T. Van der Vries and Arthur W. Sprague were present, 22 altogether. There were about 225 attending the banquet.

Mrs. Cooper is very grateful to President Kohlman for giving her the opportunity of attending the Legislative Conference.

Grade School Notes

The seventh and eighth grades have a very interesting time in our art classes. We draw figures, flowers and landscapes, then paint and color them. We get a lot of work accomplished and have a pleasant time too.

In Art class we now are planning an art exhibit for our Open House program to which everyone is invited. We are to have real people take parts of the people in the pictures. Such famous pictures as "The Song of the Lark" and "The Sower" will be shown.

Right now we are drawing "Peter" He helps us to understand action in the human body. He stands about 10 inches tall and can get into all sorts of positions. We find Peter very helpful.

Reish's Defeated in "Y" Tournament
In the basketball tournament being held at the 111th St. YMCA the Reish's were paired with the strong Vander Meer Coals and came out on the short end of a 40-24 score.

Also there was a difference of 16 points in the final score the Reish's were within hailing distance of their opponents until the final quarter.

The game started off with H. Kay shooting the first basket followed by one from Uthe.

The Vander Meers then broke thru and ran the score 11-9 in their favor as the quarter ended. In the second period Reish's made only one basket and one free throw to the Coal's 4 baskets and 1 free throw, leaving the score at half time 20-12 for the Vander Meers.

In the third session the Reish's ran the score up to within 6 points of the Coals 26-20. The final period saw the VanderMeers in their best scoring mood of the evening with 14 points while holding Reish's to 4 points. For Reish's DeRuntz, and Uthe had the stellar roles of scoring honors with 11 points for the former and 8 points for the latter.

For the Vander Meers, Kernahan made 13 points while Dickie followed close behind with 10 points. Reish (24)

Win or lose the boys are having wonderful experience in this type of play and if the law of averages hold, should come home with a few wins to their credit.

APRIL FOOLS' DAY

For almost four centuries practical jokers have had one day each year—April 1st—in which to victimize their friends.

Thought to have originated in France in connection with the calendar reformation of 1564, All Fools' day spread rapidly and today is observed in many lands, particularly our own. Even the children aren't safe. This lad, finding the jam jar, is unpleasantly surprised when a five-foot "snake" lunges at him.

Smokers, natural prey of tricksters, have good cause to be wary. Here an exploding match, handed the unhappy smoker, adds little to his enjoyment.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beagley attended the funeral of an aunt, Mrs. Al McCarty held in Chicago last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bischoff motored to Champaign last Thursday. Robert Yunker is the proud owner of a new Chevrolet coach.

Returns From 2300 Mile Hitch-Hike Trip To Cal. Fair

So first off, what mode of transportation? Possibly the most important decision to make. You will want to see it all, and you can if you ride right.

The matter of transportation will be taken up in my next article.

While reading thus far you have been saying, but about the fair as compared to the Century of Progress in Chicago in 1933?

Well let's get by that right here. The Century of Progress as a fair set a standard in magnitude, beauty and originality, which has not been surpassed. They grabbed it when it was fresh, but with the Golden Gate Exposition there is a decisive individuality in construction, landscaping, and lighting that is setting it out as a gem of beauty on Treasure Island and wait until I tell you about it. It is awe inspiring and beautiful from the Elephant towers at the entrance to the tower of the Sun and on to the pageant of the Pacific behind its glistening front, good to the last drop. Hold your hats and wait until I tell you more.

The matter of holding meetings similar to the Town Hall meetings of the air as heard on the radio were advocated in order to discuss vital issues and getting them worked into realities. The plan was favorably thought of and may be tried out in the near future.

A highly interesting part of the evening's session was an illustrated talk on the Vocophone similar to a sound movie. The talk was on "This Railroad Business" a story of pictures and words presented by the Association of American railroads showing why the railroads of the United States are the backbone of the nation. Mr. Schaefer of Mokena was in charge of the Vocophone and operated it. He is in the employ of the Rock Island.

A few of the highlights brought out were: Railroads are important to the people shipping goods by freight and express. And to the farmers. Their crops would not be worth much if we didn't have railroads. The farmers have a big stake in the railroads, and so have the 871,000 investors in railroad stocks. The railroads contribute almost a million dollars a day in taxes that go into federal, state, county and municipal governments. Freight trains run 56 percent faster than they did in 1920. The railroads have given us new luxury in passenger service with stream lined trains and 10,000 air-conditioned cars in service. Railroads are the backbone of the nation's transportation, because only railroads can provide the efficient, low-cost, all-weather mass transportation service required by industry and agriculture.

Holds Annual Meet and Election

The 14th annual meeting of the Pure Milk Association was without a question, the most outstanding co-operative meeting ever held within the Chicago Milk Shed. When one considers the price of milk, together with the chaotic conditions which exist thruout the country, it was indeed very refreshing to see how wholeheartedly the delegates sent in by the various locals, together with the hundreds of members who sat thruout the crowded day's proceedings, looked upon the many vital questions presented for their approval.

The speech of the day was made by Clifford Gregory, associate publisher of Wallace's Farmer and the cultural leaders are now looking at Wisconsin Agriculturist. Thruout his speech it was very evident that agricultural leaders are now looking at the question of co-operation in a far different light than heretofore.

The Board of Directors, at its first meeting after the annual meeting, unanimously re-elected the following officers to serve their Association for the ensuing year:

President, Gerhard H. Ekhoft, Grant Park, Ill. First Vice-president, Chas. W. Schmaling, Delavan, Wis. Second Vice-president, Glen L. Morgan, Westville, Ind. Sec., Chas. M. Cosgrove, Elgin, Ill. Treas., Emery E. Houghtby, Shabbona, Ill.

The Board also unanimously passed a resolution expressing the fullest of confidence in these men who have given unsparingly of their time in the best interests of the Association.

The attendance at the annual meeting was over 2,500 farmers from 33 counties in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin which comprise the Chicago Milk Shed. It was as previously stated, the outstanding meeting in the history of the Association.

Over 500 women attended the annual ladies' luncheon as well as the afternoon tea given in the Grand Ball Room of the Auditorium Hotel.

4-H Clubs Plan

1939 Program

Forty boys club members and leaders representing all agricultural clubs in Cook County attended the program planning meeting in Blue Island and Arlington Heights Farm Bureau Offices on the afternoon and evening of March 16.

Mr. Harold L. Jepsen, District 4-H Club Advisor was in charge of the meeting. He gave the members of the clubs a great deal of assistance in planning their programs for 1939. Suggestions were given as to sources of information to help the members in preparing the talks on the program. A number of games that would be satisfactory to use at club meetings were demonstrated.

Knit Oval Rag Rug In Various Colors

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Here is a sketch of another interesting rug. Be sure to order the leaflet to add to your collection of rug ideas.

Cut or tear the rags $\frac{3}{4}$ inch wide and use knitting needles $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in diameter. Knit the oval center first. Cast on four stitches and increase one at the end of each row until the depth of the work is 4-inches, then knit evenly for 10-inches. Bind off one stitch at the end of each row until you have four stitches left. Bind these off. The diagram gives the dimensions and colors for the bands that are sewn to this center oval. Cast on seven stitches to start each band. For the outside band, start with color 3. Knit 7-inches, then cut the fabric strip and sew color 4 to it. Continue. Use a large crochet hook and fabric strips to crochet around the oval and the outside edges of the bands. Sew together with double carpet thread.

Note: Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, contains 48 pages of step-by-step directions which have helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, copy of the new Rag Rug Leaflet will be included free. Those who have both books may secure leaflet for 6 cents in postage. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

If the promised economy drive in congress matures, it might start a business revival... Increased taxes sure to be considered by congress... Mounting expenditures and decreasing receipts continues a problem... Why Britain wanted Franco to win in Spain is explained.

WASHINGTON.—If that promised economy drive in congress which Sen. Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee, is predicting matures, it very conceivably might start the business revival that President Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins have been trying to start.

The trouble about the olive branches that Roosevelt and Hopkins have been brandishing is that apparently they have not been 100 per cent convincing to the investing public. Let us consider merely the electric industry and see how the thing works out.

Sen. Harrison

The electric industry, it so happens, is the one on which both the President and Hopkins are counting most. It was to get the wheels turning in this particular line that the surprise settlements were made by TVA with first Chattanooga and then Memphis. The object was to start private utility spending—which piled up $4,000,000,000 of needed investment that Chairman W. O. Douglas, of S. E. C., has been harping on in conversations with the President and Hopkins.

But look what was going on even while the olive branches were being waved, even while several million dollars more was agreed upon than need have been paid the Commonwealth & Southern and the Electric Bond & Share if the original Lillenthal-Wilhoite-Rankin ideas had been carried out.

First, every ounce of administrative pressure possible was exerted to force the appropriation of money by congress not only to complete the Gilbertsville dam, already started, but the Watts Bar dam as well. Second, the report of Chief Engineer Panter, of the special congressional committee which has been investigating TVA, was suppressed during these maneuvers to get the full amount of TVA appropriations desired.

Investigation Obviously Intended as a Whitewash

No attention was paid to this last by the daily newspapers, which long since lost interest in an investigation so obviously intended to be nothing but a whitewash. But surely no one directing this strategem thought that the private utilities would not know about it—especially when the active Republican members of the committee knew that the report had been submitted, that it was in the hands of Vic Donahey, chairman of the committee, and that a copy of it was in the hands of Francis Biddle, counsel in chief on the whitewashing job, who had been rewarded by the White House with a federal judgeship!

The really perplexing part of all this is that critics of TVA, knowing the opinion of Engineer Tom Panter given the committee publicly by Arthur E. Morgan, deposed chairman of TVA, in protest against Panter's appointment, do not think for a moment that the Panter report will be anything but favorable to TVA. They suspect that there may be some little point in the report, however, on which administration leaders figured TVA critics might be able to make capital. And when it is considered that the change of half a dozen votes in the house would have stopped the building of Watts Bar dam the point might really have been very important.

Two things, if they could be definitely promised with assurance that the promises would be kept, would beyond the slightest doubt cause a construction spree by the electric industry, which might easily produce the wave of prosperity for which Roosevelt and Hopkins hope. One would be that the government would construct no more hydroelectric projects. The other would be that the government would make no more free grants and cheap interest loans for construction of local electric systems. In short, a promise of no more subsidized government construction.

Question of Tax Boosts Certain to Be Considered

Despite all the promises about no tax increases there is very likely to be considerable serious discussion of tax boosts before the present session congress adjourns. Anything else will run the government into a situation which no administration likes to face during a presidential campaign year, which of course is what next year will be.

First let's look at the attitude of congress. The house, one day when a lot of Democrats were not around, voted to cut some $17,000,000 out of the TVA appropriation. The senate restored the cuts. The house conferees yielded to the senate, and the house then voted 184 to 174 to spend the money. Close, yes, but plenty.

Take another sample, the silver policy. Administration critics attack it as perhaps the most foolish thing the government is doing, from an economic standpoint—though some experts contend nothing compares with what the government has done about cotton. The silver policy is divided in two parts, paying a subsidy of more than 20 cents an ounce on all silver mined inside the United States, and buying silver from foreign countries.

Minority members a few days ago forced a vote on an amendment to the bill in the house, which would have eliminated the buying of silver from abroad, but would have left the domestic subsidy. But even this failed. The vote was 155 to 135 against the proposed economy.

While Expenditures Mounted Receipts Materially Dropped

Now let's take a look at the treasury situation, in view of this evident prospect that congress is not going to reduce expenditures. The latest figures available as this is written are for the fiscal year, which began July 1, last, up to the end of the day on February 27. Expenses for this year—referring to this period and not the full year of course—were $5,867,219,549 as compared with $4,764,910,658 for the corresponding period of last year. Receipts, however, were $3,645,500,234 for this year, and $3,844,461,038 for last year. So that while expenditures mounted by more than $1,110,000,000 receipts fell off by about $200,000,000.

So that for practically two-thirds of the fiscal year we are now passing through the treasury is about $1,300,000,000 worse off than for the comparable period of the last fiscal year! As this is reflected in debt and foreshadows what is going to happen to this government along that line, it might be of interest to say that figures for the same day—the close of business on February 27 of this year—show that the public debt of Uncle Sam was $39,850,479,573.22. This had risen from $37,631,168,041.19 on February 27, 1933.

Shows Why Britain Wanted Franco to Win in Spain

The answer to why the British foreign office has consistently wanted Franco to win in Spain, despite the fact that obviously such a victory would increase not only the power but the prestige of Italy and Germany, is very clear, once stated, whether one agrees with the logic dictating it or not. Indeed the fact that it is the Berlin-Rome axis that keeps British statesmen awake at night—a fact which on the surface would seem to create a desire in Downing street for a crushing defeat of Franco—is an integral part of the reason for wanting Franco to win.

The logic behind this is also the logic which has caused President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull to be deaf to the pleas of the liberals in this country. And believe it or not, hatred of communism here and fear of the bear that walks like a man in England has precisely nothing to do with it!

Simply stated, this mystifying logic revolves around the route from England to India and the East, via the Mediterranean sea. If you will take a good look at any fair scaled map of the Mediterranean, you will see why. Look at the narrow passage between the tip of Sicily and the projecting point of Tunis, in North Africa. Every ship going from England to India, East Africa or the Far East must traverse that narrow strait, or else the still smaller passage between Sicily and the mainland of Italy.

Before the days of the World war this did not seem important. The Italians might speak of the Mediterranean as Mare Nostrum, but the British controlled both entrances, Gibraltar and the Suez canal. But with the World war came the realization of the military importance of the submarine and the airplane—and of floating mine fields. Prior to that time the British navy could assure control of the surface of the sea, and therefore of free passage for her merchant vessels and those of any other nation to which she might choose to grant passage.

So Great Britain Had To Be Friendly With Italy

So the British made up their minds that, come what may, they would simply have to be friendly with Italy. Little as they might like the new attitude in that country, the conquest of Ethiopia, obvious aspirations in Africa which threatened British interests in that continent, they figured they would have to put up with it.

If you will consider the strategic location of the little Italian island of Pantelleria, just beyond the narrow passage between Sicily and Tunis, and figure in terms of submarines, airplanes and mines, you will begin to wonder if maybe the British are not right after all.

Reconciled to this, the British have turned their energies, in the last few years, to cultivating Franco. They have convinced themselves, and the Washington administration, that they have done a good job at this; that with the coming of peace Spain would find that England, not Italy, is the market for its exports.

England Thrives in Pageantry From Mid-March to November

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

From the time the spring show opens in Bournemouth in mid-March, until the chrysanthemum shows of November, England has a procession of floral displays.

It is the bright poster of the Royal tournament at Olympia that gives Englishmen the feeling that summer is on its way. To stirring music and the swift drumming of hoofs the Royal Horse Guards, Royal Horse artillery, and the Queen's Own Hussars gallop around the arena. Historical displays turn back the clock to birthdays of famous regiments.

The Royal Marines change from the feathered hats and yellow uniforms of 1664, through the red and white of Trafalgar, to sun helmet and "king's badge," the Royal Marines of today.

The Black Watch, whose list of battle honors stirs martial music in the memory and makes one picture its far-flung flags at "Mangalore," "Waterloo," "Sevastopol," "Lucknow," the "Hindenburg Line," and "Megiddo," re-enacts four phases of its history.

'Gallant Forty-two' Oldest.

Formed in the Highlands and given a special tartan, since its members came from different clans, the "Gallant Forty-two" is the oldest of Highland regiments, and in its bonnets wears the Red Hackle because the Black Watch regained an enemy position which its former wearers, the Dragoons, had lost.

As they march through the arena at Olympia, their bagpipes sing the story of their progress down the years. The "Black Highland Laddie" carries one back before the American revolution, "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose" dates from the Egyptian wars half a century ago, and "Keep the Home Fires Burning" needs no dating among those who remember "Over There." Pipes and drums play other tunes to stir Scottish blood—"The Banks of Allan Water," "The Hills o' Perth," "Highland Harry," and "The Kilt Is My Delight."

London's daily pageantry centers in two giant guardsmen, mounted on statuelike horses, about halfway between Trafalgar square and the Cenotaph. Every hour the two human statues come to life and give place to two others, and at 11 o'clock every morning guard mount is held in the courtyard of the Horse Guards building.

June Begins Busily.

When the King's birthday, speech day at Eton, and the derby all come within a week, June begins with a bang. Several days before the king's birthday party, when 1,800 officers and men parade their allegiance to their king, there is a dress rehearsal, complete in every detail except for the presence of the king.

Skirling pipes and the muffled beat of saddle drums carried by the towering piebald stand out amid the music of massed bands and fife and drum corps. Music, color, precision, and patriotism add to the majesty of the spectacle on Horse Guards parade, and splendid soldiery slowly march past in honor of their flag and their sovereign. Women turn their vanity mirrors into periscopes, and even aliens join in the prayer "God Save the King."

On Founder's day at Eton, June 4, parental pride centers in the pink-cheeked, silk-hatted students of Eton college, 500 years old. Fathers in baggy tweeds and sons in toppers chat together, while mothers and sisters invade this man's world.

Founder's day is also speech day, with Sophocles, Racine, and our own Herman Melville sharing with Shakespeare, Dickens, and Lewis Carroll the honor of having their works declaimed.

Eton's distinctive "wall game," played in November, recalls that in this school of 1,000 pupils there are 70 "collegers," or "foundation scholars," who win their place through scholarship, and form a group apart from the 930 or so "oppidans" whose tuition and board are paid for by their parents.

Ear Muffs for Protection.

The Eton wall game antedates wide playing fields. The goals consist of a small door and an elm tree at opposite ends of the wall. Since not one goal has been scored in more than 30 years it is no wonder that commentators find fun-making easier than fact-finding about this annual contest between eleven king's scholars and an eleven chosen from the oppidans. Not nose guards, but ear muffs, are worn. They save aristocratic auralles from being scraped off against the wall.

The colorful Royal Scot Greys, in a full-dress rehearsal, charge at a full gallop as they prepare at Hounslow barracks for the annual royal tournament.

The aquatic festival attracts large crowds. The 10 boats parade rather than race, but there is always a good chance that at least one straw-hatted crew and its "cox," toggled out like a Tom Thumb admiral, will overturn while rising in their seats in mid-Thames.

But the choice event of the Thames year is the Henley regatta, "that garden party in a punt."

Over a course a trifle more than a mile and a quarter long sweep speedy waterbugs propelled by the finest of amateur oarsmen. Strict interpretation of what constitutes an amateur has caused individual disappointment, but the name of the Royal regatta remains unsullied, and the water-borne picnic surrounding a rowing race is the Thames' fairest spectacle, celebrated on a day when Anglo-American gatherings are conspicuously cordial—"the Fourth of July."

Derby Day Starts Early.

The Grand National is pure horse racing; the derby is a county fair. For days before the race, gypsies move in with testimonials brightly painted on their motor coaches, and the various catchpenny devices of carnival time are set up on the bare heath which on derby day will be hidden beneath a million feet. The course, shaped like a horse-shoe, inspires an atmosphere of good luck.

Early in the morning thousands of people are already crossing the race-course on strips of matting, laid there to protect the pathway of the three-year-olds that are to run for the Derby stakes. Hundreds of motorbuses, from whose roofs the passengers would later view the race, are already lined the rails. "Pearlies" wander about, gathering funds for hospital in London's east end, fortune tellers with borrowed babies graciously accept the trifling sums which would bring fortune to the givers, and tipsters, clad in parti-colored shirts, with racing saddles on the turf beside them as visual evidence that they are "in the know," deal out envelopes containing the names of different horses, each bound to win.

In the dressing rooms you see featherweight costumes, boots, and saddles that would not hamper a jack rabbit, much less a horse.

Eating and drinking go on without let-up, bookies dangle the hope of fortune before many to whom this is the day of days, and staid bank officials are "taking a chance."

TIPS to Gardeners

DON'T put an added burden on your flowers by asking them to grow in conditions to which they are not suited. Flowers are like races of humans. Some thrive in warm, moist climates. Others, through the centuries, have become accustomed to intensive cold.

Certain flowers, for instance, may be grown successfully in comparatively cool, semi-shaded locations. If you have such spots in your yard, don't plant your zinnias or petunias there.

Any of the following will prove more satisfactory, according to Harry A. Joy, flower expert: Annuals—balsam, clarkia, coleus, nasturtium, pansy, calendula and vinca; perennials—English daisy, campanula, columbine, myosotis, sweet William and viola.

If you live in drouthy sections or if your flower beds are on well-drained soil in full sun, try the following: Annuals—abronia, ageratum, alyssum procumbens, arctotis, calliopsis, candytuft, cosmos, four o'clock, lupin texensis, petunia, portulaca, sunflower, verbenia, and zinnia; perennials—coreopsis and hollyhock.

Pope Pius XII, Diplomat and Ecclesiast, Brings Modern Statecraft to Vatican

Unchanged Foreign Policy Expected Under New Pontiff's Reign

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

In no living man's memory had a pope been chosen in 24 hours. Many years had passed since all 62 cardinals walked into the secret conclave from which one must emerge supreme pontiff; in less urgent times some of the sacred college might be absent.

Most important, not since the resolute monk Hildebrand was elected Pope Gregory VII in 1073 had a papal secretary of state become the vicar of Christ.

But it was no accident that the Roman Catholic church presented a solid front, or that its college of cardinals acted quickly to choose Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, statesman and ecclesiast, as Pius XII.

In a day that demands strong men the church could find none stronger, none better fitted by experience and instinct to carry on—with greater emphasis—the policies of international statecraft which first found expression under the late Pius XI. Since 1929 the new pope has engineered Vatican foreign policy from behind scenes as papal secretary of state. Since 1917, when Benedict XV sent him to war-torn Germany in a vain peace gesture, Eugenio Pacelli has been what any nation but the Vatican would term a "career diplomat."

Comes From Vatican Family.

Forty years ago Pius XII disregarded a century-old family tradition which has made the Pacelli family esteemed members of the old Vatican aristocracy. His grandfather was undersecretary of the interior from 1851 to 1870. His father was an attorney at the papal court, as his brother, Francesco, is today. Eugenio Pacelli entered the priesthood, but the statesman in him has shone brightly as the churchman. Since the day he began writing rough letter drafts for papal diplomats in 1889, his life has been that of the state secretariat. Step by step he climbed under the eyes of Cardinal Gasparri, whom he was destined one day to succeed.

In 1917 came the appointment as papal nuncio to Germany, a peace-making effort which failed, but so impressed the former Kaiser Wilhelm that he devoted a full chapter in his memoirs to the future cardinal and pope. From this first diplomatic role it was but a short step to re-establishment of relations between the Vatican and Protestant Germany. In 1924 the nuncio's seven-year German mission was climaxed by the famous concordat. Returning to Rome, Pacelli was honored by elevation to the college of cardinals.

The subsequent years have been far from happy for the Vatican or its chief diplomat. Early in 1929 the Lateran agreement with Italy allowed Pius XI to end his voluntary exile in Vatican City. Since then old treaties have been renewed with Austria, Germany and Yugoslavia, while Rumania signed a new pact. And though Cardinal Pacelli could take heart from these accomplishments, he must have frowned over less happy developments which placed the Catholic church diametrically opposite the anti-Christ spectres of totalitarianism in its sundry forms.

THE POPE IN AMERICA—Pope Pius XII, new head of the Roman Catholic church, when, as Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, he spoke at Catholic University in Washington during his visit in 1936.

Under Adolf Hitler the church has suffered first in Germany and later in Austria. In both Italy and Germany there have arisen neo-paganism movements for "racial purification" and persecution of minorities. Mexico's religious foundations have been rocked, and the Spanish civil war came—in the eyes of 350,000,000 Catholics—closer than any since the crusades to being a holy war.

Changed Attitude Seen.

This was initiation under fire, but the cardinal rose to his task. So well, in fact, that democracies which had long frowned on the Vatican's "interference" now discovered a strong ally for the inevitable showdown with dictators. Typical was the reaction in Protestant England, where for 500 years the pope has been something to fear. But the election of Pius XII brought editorial praise for "the wisdom of the sacred college."

No nation can claim the Vatican's political support against another nation, but the spiritual influence of Catholicism upon Catholic, as voiced through the pope, is a potent force in the Twentieth century battle between Christianity and paganism. England cannot forget this, nor has Hitler forgotten it, if we may believe his reported comment on the new pope several years ago: "It isn't the pope (then Pius XI) who is making all the trouble for Germany. He is too old and sick for such affairs. It is Cardinal Pacelli, it is Cardinal Pacelli!"

There is still another lesson in the choice of a papal diplomat. One of the Catholic church's proudest stories concerns the aforementioned monk Hildebrand, last secretary of state to become pope. As Gregory VII he, too, had trouble with a German ruler. The last pope who felt he must obtain imperial ratification for his election, Gregory was blocked by Germany's Emperor Henry IV. Gregory had demanded that Henry cease dictatorial rule over the Catholic church in Germany. Henry replied by summoning several high German prelates and declaring Gregory deposed.

Emperor Finally Absolved.

This game ended when Gregory publicly absolved Henry's subjects of allegiance to him. The climax came when Gregory, stopping at the castle of Canossa on his trip northward into Germany, kept Henry waiting barefoot in the snow for three days, dressed as a penitent. Finally he granted absolution and Henry's authority was restored.

Rome and Berlin may not be led to Canossa by Pius XII, but this modern counterpart of Gregory VII includes both Italy and Germany among his problems. A pope's chief duty, naturally, is to maintain the Catholic religion where it already has root, and to evangelize it in new lands. But this is an age where extraordinary duties sometimes seem more vital at the moment. Catholics and Protestants alike recognize their need for a united Christian front against political doctrines which they believe are working to place mankind's every action and thought under state domination. That is why Pius XII will be a popular pope, especially among democracies.

Whereas Pius XI described himself as a "library mouse," the new pontiff has led a more worldly life. As cardinal legate he traveled through the United States and South America. On the latter trip he did penitence for the honors heaped on his shoulders by removing the soft mattress from his bed and sleeping on the blanket-covered springs. Thus he exhibited the spirit of humility which Catholics believe becomes a great Christian.

New Pope Popular Here.

On his trip to the United States he crossed the continent by air; he thereby becomes the first pope to have flown. At that time the new pontiff lunched with President Roosevelt and "his truly American family." So far as is known; no previous pope has visited this country, and this—coupled with the recent date of his visit—makes him especially popular here. There is good reason to believe it may lead the United States to send a minister to the Vatican, this country being one of the few important nations not now represented there.

Already there are conciliatory signs in the air as Germany and Italy begin recognizing the new pontiff's vigor. This is especially marked in Italy, where even the mighty Premier Mussolini dares not flout open defiance of the Catholic church in a strongly Catholic country.

But while Italy attempts to make the most of Cardinal Pacelli's election, which was openly opposed by Il Telegrafo, the newspaper of Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Germany has pursued a policy of watchful waiting.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Shows How the Right Foods Can Help to Guard Against Springtime Debility

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THE gap between winter and spring has always been recognized as a trying period. Work seems a burden, tempers are short, appetites are poor, and little enjoyment is derived from meals.

Just as the daily tide of human vitality is at a low ebb during the hours before dawn, so does the annual tide of health reach a low ebb in the weeks that mark the end of winter and the official beginning of spring.

Bodily reserves have been gradually depleted until many children and adults suffer from lassitude and fatigue that cannot be dispelled merely by getting a good night's sleep.

The Best Spring Tonic

A generation ago it was believed that sulphur and molasses, and sassafras tea would overcome springtime debility. Homemakers dosed their families with a variety of so-called tonics, in a frantic effort to put color into pale cheeks, to soothe irritable nerves, to overcome that tired feeling.

We know today why their efforts met with little success. For we have learned what they could not know—that the best possible tonic is a carefully chosen diet rich in minerals and vitamins.

In those days, the science of nutrition was in its infancy. Vitamins were still undiscovered, and there was much that we had not learned about the role of the mineral salts in regulating body processes. No wonder mothers grasped at any mixture that promised to put roses back into the cheeks of their anemic-looking children.

How lucky we are today! For science has taught us what we should eat to help increase pep and vitality, and build rich red blood. And modern methods of transportation, refrigeration, food preservation and packaging, have made the necessary foods easily available. It merely remains for the homemaker to acquaint herself with the nutritional needs of her family.

Enriching the Blood

The blood is frequently impoverished by the time spring puts in an appearance. That is not surprising, for in many households the winter diet contains a preponderance of carbohydrates, and fats, with far too few of the precious minerals and vitamins. It is often deficient in iron, the mineral that is required for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment in the blood, and in copper, which is required for the proper utilization of iron.

Inasmuch as 3 per cent of the blood cells are destroyed daily, it is obvious that unless adequate amounts of iron-rich foods are available to replace them, the number will soon become subnormal. Moreover, it has been found that many minor disturbances of the body cause a loss of iron, and that mild infections are a common cause of iron loss.

Thus, individuals who have been consuming a diet that is barely adequate in respect to iron may find themselves on the border line of iron deficiency following an infection.

Iron-Rich Foods

Every homemaker, therefore, should make a determined effort to include plenty of iron-rich foods in her menus. These foods include liver, eggs, whole grain cereals, dried fruits, lean meats and green leafy vegetables.

Green vegetables cannot be emphasized too strongly, for they tend somewhat to be crowded out of the winter diet by the starchy and fatty foods which provide more heat and energy. And investigations with children have demonstrated that when vegetables and fruits are limited, there is a certain sluggishness of blood formation. Green vegetables not only supply iron in significant amounts, but their iron has been found to be especially well absorbed from the digestive tract.

Right now it is most important to provide large amounts of dandelion greens, spinach, kale, chard, watercress, lettuce and green cabbage. Serve a cooked green vegetable at one meal each day and a generous green salad at another.

Top the salad with fruit, if you want to add more minerals and vitamins . . . segments of orange or grapefruit, slices of banana or pineapple, or a mixture of apple and celery.

These fruits also supply important minerals and vitamins, and like the green vegetables, they leave an alkaline ash following digestion, and therefore help to maintain the acid-base balance of the body.

Plenty of Bulk Required

There is still another reason why green vegetables and fruits should be consumed in liberal quantities. These foods, along with whole grain cereals, provide an abundance of bulk or cellulose which is necessary to help promote regularity. They tend to offset the effects of a too highly concentrated winter diet. Very often that feeling of lassitude, mistakenly called spring fever, can be overcome by adding to the diet a larger proportion of these naturally laxative foods.

It's also desirable to take an adequate supply of fluids to help flush the system of waste. In addition to a generous amount of water, there should be a pint of milk daily for every adult, a quart for every child, and fruit juices in abundance. Orange juice, grapefruit juice, pineapple juice and tomato juice all supply vitamins A, B and C, and their refreshing fruit acids have a beneficial effect upon the appetite.

Exercise and Fresh Air

Two more splendid antidotes for the let-down feeling that comes at this season are moderate exercise and fresh air. The proper use of the muscular system is important to health and vitality, yet many people go through the winter taking far too little exercise.

In general, you will eat better, sleep better, feel more alert and at the same time more relaxed, if you make a point of getting out into the open every day.

Sleep, sunshine, fresh air and the right food—these are Nature's tonics!

Down to Business

"I cannot understand," said the young man, "why you permit your daughter to sue me for breach of promise. You remember that you were bitterly opposed to our engagement, because you said I wasn't good enough for her and would disgrace your family." "That, young man," said the girl's father, "was sentiment. This is business."

PIUS XII ON DICTATORS

At New York in 1936

"In these difficult times, so disturbed by political and social passions, the voice of the pope is not only the authoritative word of the head of the Catholic church, but also expresses the dictates of reason and equity, of justice, and prudence and humanity."

At Budapest in 1938

"Face to face with us is drawn up the lugubrious array of the militant godless, shaking the clenched fist of anti-Christ against everything we hold most sacred. Face to face with us spreads the army of those who would like to make all peoples of the earth and each individual human being believe they can find prosperity only by receding from the gospel of Christ and that the happiness and greatness of society, as of individuals, can but grow dim in the shadow of the Cross."

At Lourdes, France, in 1935

"It matters little that they (the dictators) mass around the flag of social revolution. They are inspired by a false conception of the world and life. Whether they are possessed by superstition of race and blood, their philosophy as that of others, rests upon principles essentially opposed to those of the Christian faith. And on such principles the church does not consent to form a compact with them at any price."

BETTER RESULTS from BETTER EQUIPMENT

THE RIGHT KIND OF FEEDER can do much toward promoting the growth and health of young birds. Healthy birds mature earlier — are more profitable. Good layers are the result of good care during the growing period. Provide your birds with feeders that are convenient — that will encourage your flock to eat — that are sanitary and prevent feed waste.

This Jamesway Reel Type Feeder with its easy rolling reel prevents roosting on the feeder — keeps birds out of feed and leaves feed free from contamination. Incent top edge saves feed. Reel and stand adjustable for growing flock. Made of heavy galvanized rust resisting sheet metal for long wear.

WATER AS IMPORTANT AS FEED Almost 60% of a chicken's body consists of water. Reduction in the proportion of water will prove detrimental to the growth and development of the birds. Keep them supplied with plenty of clean, fresh water in this handy Jamesway pail type float feed waterer.

Let us show you our Complete Line of Jamesway Poultry Equipment for Chicks, Growing Flock, and Laying Hens.
